

TABLE OF CONTENTS

CHAPTER 1

Drinking Cola in the Ancient Kingdom of Congo	» 9
1. Introduction: from past to present, from oil to the potential of Angolan agriculture	» 9
1.2. The potential and challenges of agriculture and agri-food tourism in Angola	» 11
2. The Kingdom of Congo and the story of an ancient Cola drink	» 13
3. Angola agri-food: land grabbing, food import, and the importance of investing in small scale farming	» 15
3.1. The new frontier for agri-food and traditional cultivation in Angola	» 17
4. Geographical indications (GIs): why a sui generis right could contribute to a new approach for Angolan agri-food	» 17
4.1. Elements of GIs philosophy	» 17
4.2. Geographical indications in Angola: potential protection for Cola fruit and other species	» 19
5. Conclusion	» 21

CHAPTER 2

Agri-Food Geographical Indications in the Republic of Cabo Verde	» 29
1. Introduction	» 29
2. Geo-historical background	» 30
3. Historical Review of Industrial Property in Cabo Verde	» 32
3.1. Legal framework for the protection of designations of origin and geographical indications in Cabo Verde	» 33
4. The African context and the valorisation strategy behind agri-food appellations of origin and geographical indications	» 38
4.1. GIs impact on culture, landscape preservation and rural development	» 39
5. Historical presence of wine in Cabo Verde and the Wines produced on the Island of Fogo.....	» 40
6. Wine-food destination: The rationale for protecting GIs and analysis of trends and theories for creating resilience in this economic sector.....	» 42
7. Cabo Verde and Fogo Island's potentials in the agri-food tourism	» 43
8. Economic Development data, tourism and the necessity of a strong agri-food sector	» 45
9. Conclusion	» 48

CHAPTER 3

Traditional Value Chains Versus Megaprojects and the Case of the Tete Goat Pdo in Mozambique	» 55
1. Introduction	» 55
2. Mozambique: past and present	» 56

3. Agriculture in Mozambique and land issues: a missed opportunity?	59
3.1. A new geography of agri-food through GIs and small-scale traditional farming: an uneasy path	60
4. The democracy of geographical indications needs democratic structures	63
4.1. Geographical indications in Mozambique: legal framework	65
5. Megaprojects versus Tete goat Geographical indications	65
5.1. Cabrito de Tete	65
5.2. Megaprojects in the Tete Province	66
6. Conclusion	67

CHAPTER 4

Discovering Neverland: São Tomé and Príncipe and the Development of the Agricultural Heritage of a Multi-Ethnic Population..... »

1. Introduction: identity and agriculture: an inseparable combination in the history of São Tomé and Príncipe	73
2. A very special 'colonization'	74
3. Post-independence and the agricultural question	75
4. Challenges and potentials of STP's agri-food sector..... »	78
4.1. Rural population	79
4.2. Food products yesterday and today »	80
5. Discussion: geographical indications as a driving force for development and the question of cultural identity in relation to agri-food products..... »	83
5.1. Geographical indications for a new development model »	84
5.2. Geographical indications and international protection »	85
5.3. Some problems in the implementation of these rights	87
6. Conclusion..... »	89